AMPUTATION RECOMMENDED

But a Better, Safer Method Found.

For twenty years I was an awful sufferer from Varicose veins and ulcers on my leg. For twelve winters I sat in a chair, my leg pained me so I could not lie down.

The doctors began to say I would never use it again.

Others advised amputating my leg to prevent gangrene from setting in.

One day I read of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I bought a bottle and commenced taking it.

And I surely believe I had not taken Favorite Remedy I would not be alive today. My leg healed up entirely and I am now well and strong.

THE County Fair.

There's a touch of vivid red on the maples overhead,
And the golden rays below;
There's an underlying hint
In the gorgeousness of tint,
As the birds and their nestlings know.
And the mellow rippling fruits
In their red and yellow suits,
To outdo each other as they arrive.
For it is the very air
That September surely arrives.
With September surely arrives.
Then from all the hills around
The pumpkins and the ground,
Drive the ox and the milk steer;
Bring the alderman pig
And the trotting horse and rig.
Not forgetting the patchwork queer.
As the gate you amble through
All the folks you ever knew
Will appear from every part of the earth;
Though it rains the second day
(As it always does, they say)
Still you'll get your money's worth.
Bove the glare of footling sand,
Shout the judges on the stand,
And you watch the fleet horses "go".
Down the little half-mile track
To the other side and back
In an inch-gaining, struggling row.
As the nose of a flyer
First speedily beats the wire
Away sails your hat in the air,
While you shout yourself hoarse,
And the young men and maidens
Nothing equals the county fair.

The Men of Enniskillen.
Men of Enniskillen, O ye men of Enniskillen,
Who so bravely fought for Ireland in the days
Of your deeds of noble daring,
Though the green no more you're wearing,
O ye men of Enniskillen I will strike the harp
O'er you once more.

Ireland first—that was your watchword,
Freedom for her was your aim,
Crushed by foot of English oppressor,
Boon that never, never came,
For ye have sung your praises,
Few the poets have been,
To raise sword or pen in honor
Of Enniskillen's loyal men.
Few bards care to twine the laurel
For a slowly dying cause,
But for the men, the victors, ever
Shouts the wide world an applause.
Long your deeds of noble daring
Will be remembered here,
Though she has no city to crown you,
Emerald Isle, across the sea.

O ye men of Enniskillen,
Spies of the nighty dead,
That around you ever stand,
Ireland would be comforted,
If you once more be her standards
As of yore o'er field and plain,
And the sword unsheath for battle,
For the Irishmen in chains.
But, O men of Enniskillen,
That can never, never be,
God will right the wrongs of Ireland
Out there in Eternity. DANA HARLOW.

The Last Red Leaf.

[The following poem by MARGARET SANGSTER is printed by request.]

In the topmost bough, the nearest the sky,
The last red leaf had its beautiful place.
It knew the winds as they wandered by,
And the ties of the sun on its face.
When the rest of the leaves had grown tired
And no more
This little red leaf held bravely on,
And Mother Nature, so wise and old,
Smiled as she looked at the small red leaf.
The red leaf and the banners of brown
And gold
Had finished their triumph bright and brief,
Held the fort when its mates were gone.
"You may stay," she said, "till the curtain falls
Till the birds have flown to the far sweet south."
Till the bugle blast of the North-wind calls—
The bugle that has frost and snow in its mouth—
And then, dear leaf, when the play is done,
You must go to sleep at the foot of the tree.
So the little red leaf like a ribbon bright
Waved from its place at the top of the tree;
It saw the stars as they kindled their light,
It caught the glimpse of the shining sea,
And one day feeling a waft of snow
The little red leaf made haste to go.
It fell asleep and did not wake,
It was not tired, its course was run.
The little red leaf in dusk and gleam
Had been happy and gay and its tasks were done.

With never a moan nor a fretting care,
"Goodnight," it said it was not there.
"Tis a happy world if day by day
We stand in our lot and do our best,
Content and joyful as long to stay
In the tender hands that keep us here
With love and sunshine with never a fear."
"Tis a happy world, our Father's world,
And the place He sets us in to do
Our earthly task till our flag is furled,
Is bright with sunshine and pealed with dew.
Like the little red leaf let us blithely wait
Till the angels open the Heaven-gate.

What Will the Harvest Be?
"Among Oxford Hills" as written in the Oxford County Advertiser of Sept. 4th set my mind in a reminiscent whirl and my pencil scribbling. The main feature which interested me was the struggle for entertainment on the road, and contrast between the old-time hospitality and that of these later days.

Going back to my childhood, I can remember the winter of 1872, when I was without a cent in my pocket, made welcome, fed, lodged for the night and in the morning sent on his way with all pangs of hunger subdued.

To-day all is changed. At one time returning to those youthful surroundings where only here and there remained former associates, and others where the children occupied and had taken strange life partners; among these even it was not convenient for pay to grant the favor of a night's lodging, but the very few old-timers were different, retaining still the milk of human kindness, which makes for a fellow-feeling, who art soft fused the eye with tears, when the scenes of other days were referred to.

This changed condition from fraternal instincts to a condition of pure selfishness so different from a former condition, the unkempt and decaying condition of the landscape, the old church, the abandoned schoolhouse.

And there the cemetery
Outlying on the right,
Where monuments reflecting
In rays of somber light,
Where graves of friends and kindred
Of parents kind and true,
And those I knew in childhood,
Their numbers not a few.
Again the old, old homestead
Presents itself to view,
The scenes of early childhood,
Its pleasures ever new.
The orchard with its apple trees,
The cattle in the lane,
To see them as I saw them—
But O, I look in vain.

All of these things conspired to create a feeling of sadness that banished all desire for future visits to our native heath. Taking the experience of others as has been related to me of their struggles on the highway for rest for man and beast, we will briefly mention one instance. A man on one occasion took in a traveling wet and bedraggled, for the night, who greatly disturbed the wife (and here let me mention is where the trouble generally emanates).

Later on this same couple on pleasure bent started by team for a tour in the eastern part of the State. After a driving as far as it was advisable on the horse, account, they called at a thrifty farmhouse for a night's entertainment. "No we can't keep you, but at the next house they will accommodate you." And so the play went on, the next and the next. Finally becoming discouraged and recalling his wife's unwillingness to lodge the weary traveler he broke out, "Well, I suppose I can drive all night and I hope you will freeze as hard as adamant." Approaching another farmhouse with far and trembling he put the now stereotyped question. "Yes," came the answer, "drive right in." In a cheerful and hospitable tone, and here their day's troubles were ended. We thank God that all fellow feeling has not become extinct.

Approaching another farmhouse with

Where come this change? Is it hard to comprehend? Taking into consideration the great change from the large families of former times, where equal rights were inculcated in each individual, to the few children of the present time, where perhaps one or two are allowed an existence, and these treated as a child treats her doll, to dress and display, the real child being brought up in idleness, every selfish instinct gratified, in gaudy apparel, a real exhibition of vanity and conceit, traveling the streets night and day, while their hard worked parents are toiling for a bare subsistence for themselves, or embezzling the funds of their employers.

As like begets like, this condition goes on until self becomes the controlling factor in life, to dress, to adopt all rowdy fashions, the women on the street hatless, and then a hat of kite dimensions, surrounded with dress adjusted to make an exhibition of the form, etc.

These conditions all tend to foster discontent. When these are married and thrown on their resources, then they see others more prosperous and better dressed than themselves. Then comes the winter of their discontent," with the usual appeal to the law to unloose the bonds.

What will the harvest be? When will there arrive a condition of universal brotherhood, when hospitality is confined to sets, especially with the inevitable extinction of the Anglo-Saxon? Will the foreign blood which will soon control all institutions in this country by intermarriage, and emigration follow eventually on the same lines, or will these increase and multiply, according to their present custom and creed?

I cannot change it. You cannot change it, as long as the sophistical teachings of the optimist are allowed to guide the masses. And the end is not yet, but we cease to moralize.

If you are losing appetite, lying awake nights, try Hood's Sarsaparilla—it's just the tonic you need.

Chats With Our Doctor.

It is important to health that toilet articles should constantly be kept clean. Cloths used in washing the face or body should be placed daily in a basin of warm water in which a little borax has been dissolved and allowed to remain for a short time. Then they may be washed out in warm soap suds, rinsed in clear water and hung in the open air and sunlight to dry. Bath towels are benefited by being bleached on the grass occasionally. To clean sponges that are used in the bath, or for other purposes, boil them three or four hours, adding to the water which should cover them, two tablespoonfuls of soda. Afterward rise thoroughly in keeping the sponge after this in chloric acid mixed with four times the quantity of water, and then mixing in cold water until all smell of acid is gone, they may be made as good as new.

Combs and hair brushes should be cleaned every week. Wash hair brushes in cold soap suds. Dipping them in gasoline occasionally helps in keeping them clean. The toothbrush should be washed thoroughly after being used and once a week should be soaked in borax or soda water.

In days gone by various pranks used to be played by the boys on the old doctor who traveled through that part of the country where I lived. The old gentleman, however, was equal to all occasions. I remember one day, when he came out of a house where he had been calling on a sick man, a big pumpkin dangling from the axle of his carriage. Taking out his knife he promptly severed the string by which it was suspended; tossed the pumpkin into the wagon and drove away. The trials of the country doctor were often very severe. One whom I knew met with an accident on a lonely road. His carriage being overturned, and he was pinned underneath the wreck for several hours before any one arrived to release him.

When dining at hotels and restaurants I have been greatly surprised to see the amount of salt that people sift over their food. Though the food may have been prepared by an experienced cook who is supposed to know how much salt should be put into meats, vegetables and other articles of food, yet many think they cannot eat the food unless the quantity of salt is greatly increased. I believe many persons eat too much salt. One of the evil results of the habit is to paralyze the nerves of taste so that no article of food can be enjoyed unless it has a salty flavor. Furthermore, the skin and kidneys are excessively taxed in removing the salt from the blood. The amount of salt required by the system is very small.

A blister caused by an ill-fitting shoe may be treated as follows: Cut open from end to end and when the fluid has disappeared dust a little iodine under the flap of each blister. A small piece of absorbent cotton is then applied and kept in place by a strip of adhesive plaster. It is stated by the physician who recommends this treatment that the patient can at once put on his shoe and walk without material inconvenience and in less than a day they will be found dried up and there will be a new layer of epidermis.—[Mirror.

The tide of travel turns again.
Like tides returning to the sea;
They come—the travelers young and old,
Full half reluctantly.
Back to the stony heaved streets,
The smothering walls, the rush and din;
The city like an octopus
Spreads out to take them in.

Training in Business That Benefits Wives.

Do business women make good wives? If by business women we take girls of the middle classes who, for some reason, have had to earn their own living, the question may be answered in the affirmative.

There are many good reasons for this. The business woman has learned the salutary need of punctuality. She has learned that it is necessary for business people to go by a certain train in order that the office may be reached by the proper time, and she also knows, perhaps by hard experience the need of leaving the breakfast table still hungry, so that the train shall be caught. Therefore she has also learned that the few minutes which to the girl who stays at home all day means but a little extra self-indulgence means to her, the business woman, a self denial which quickly makes itself felt, and she will, when married, make a point of being up early enough to send the bread winner off in good time for the train and yet give him sufficient leisure for his breakfast and for a glance at the papers.

Then again the business woman has learned to earn money and to spend it to the best advantage. She has learned to save for coming necessities, and perhaps out of the little she has at her own disposal, even to pay her premium toward an "old age pension" for herself. She will be able to guard against the fascination of sales, through the useful remembrance of times when she gave way to the delight of bargain buying and purchased several things cheap, with the result that the "season ticket" period came around all too soon, and lunches had to be brought down to the "skate and tea point, with the accompanying attacks of indigestion.

She has learned to be spoken to sharply and perhaps unjust

In the Haunts of the Hunted.

It is time to take the old shotgun from its case, wherein it has slept for more than half a year. It may have gathered a speck or two of rust in damp spring nights, but the inner tubes should shine like polished silver. It may be that the oil has dried where exposed to the air, but the locks when the hammer is drawn back should ring as clearly as a bell.

That will depend upon the condition in which it was put away. He is no sportsman in the full sense of the word, however straight may be his aim, unless he loves his weapon. He who loves his weapon will see that it gets as good housing as he himself has.

There is a strong tendency, also, to run to the small calibres in shot guns. Ten years ago the 16-gauge was coming into favor. Today it is well established, but is no longer regarded as a very small gauge. Plenty of shooters are now using 20-gauges; some even go to the length of using the 24 gauge. There are very few guns of this size made in America. They are put up mostly in Germany and imported here by the extremists. Generally the gun comes with one stock and two sets of barrels, of 20-gauge and 24-gauge respectively. They make a handsome little weapon, are feather-light, may be handled with great quickness in brush, and shoot fairly well, but they have not the range or the shot spread of the larger calibres.

As the powder improves sportsmen are coming more and more to shoot directly at their targets, though there are some birds that at certain angles must still be led. No maker will ever get a powder that will enable a shooter to drop a crossing teal at forty yards by shooting straight at it. The solitary teal, separated from its flock and going to roost at dusk, is the greatest of feathered space annihilators. It comes and is gone and all there is of it is a memory of a black streak and a tremor and shimmer of wing.

The wing shot who sees the sight on his gun, or even in action knows that there is a sight, is rare. Most of the successful bird shots do not see the gun when the bird has flushed, much less the sight. They keep their eyes fastened on the bird and the gun takes care of itself. It comes to the shoulder swings into correct position and the finger presses the trigger at the proper moment automatically, just as the pen in writing forms a letter automatically. These are the men who shoot the shotgun with both eyes open, the proper way to shoot it. There are other shots, some of them very fine, who close one eye. These men see the bird over the barrels. If they make any effort to sight at all it is only by putting the entire end of the gun on the bird.

Restoring the County-Fairs.

Too much prominence is given to the Brockton idea. Consequently the interests of genuine agriculture have suffered. What is more, the policy has resulted in financial failure in a considerable degree. That is, the Brockton idea is all right enough for Brockton. It calls together an immense concourse of people from all over the eastern part of the State. It makes use of all sorts of entertainments. The city suspends other business, and everybody turns out to make a great day of the fair. It is a success financially. But how much does it promote the interests of agriculture?

The educational side of the agricultural fairs has been neglected. Other parts of the State cannot imitate Brockton, and the consequence is that the quality of the fairs has declined until they pay less attention to the agricultural interests than they should, while the prices paid to other attractions have made it impossible to run the fairs successfully in a financial way in many places. But if the fairs are restored to their legitimate function, if they are made agricultural first of all, and the side-shows are given a smaller place, then the people of the State will once more value them for their intrinsic merit, and they will be restored to their former leading place in the estimation of the people who have a personal and financial interest in things agricultural.—J. L. Ellsworth, Secretary Massachusetts Board of Agriculture.

Are not too many Maine fairs at work from the "Brockton idea?"

WEST FRYEBURG.

Knew a Bear's Track.

Orrin Heath, the veteran hunter, trapper and angler of Green Hill, N. H., visiting his orchard at the foot of Hurricane mountain lately found his trees of Red Astrachan apples badly broken down and the apples he failed to find. Mr. Heath declared that it was the work of bears. Some one else suggested it might be the biped species. "By g'ief, I guess I know a bear's track" was his characteristic reply. The rheumatism of encroaching age and the lameness caused by a Confederate bullet in his shoulder sadly interfere with the veteran's pursuit of the bear.

Neighbor Charles was noticed Monday morning having resumed his work in carrying the school children of his district to the school No. 8.

Rev. Mr. Manchester's family did not accompany him on his return as reported last week. They remain during a part of this month, when Mr. Manchester will return to accompany them.

Mrs. Dean A. Ballard has disposed of her real estate in Jackson, N. H., her late home, to parties who will occupy it as a summer resort for which its elevated and attractive situation makes it well adapted.

Ranford Locke and wife of South Chatham, Mrs. L. C. Manchester and son and daughter, Neil and Alice Manchester, make an excursion this week taking in the Sebago lake and Songo river route to Harrison and Bridgton, thence to Fryeburg and to their homes in South Chatham, N. H.

The Stirling Literary club met Tuesday, Sept. 1st, at the home of the president of the club. Mrs. Marion Chandler read several selections from the poems of H. W. Longfellow, Mrs. M. A. Hill read a humorous sketch by Seumas Macmanus and being in particularly good voice Mrs. Olive Hutchins was persuaded to favor those present with several vocal numbers, which were much enjoyed. The president was the gratified recipient of a bouquet of beautiful German asters and nasturtiums tendered by Mrs. Harriett O. Jones. The next meeting will be Sept. 15th at the home of Mrs. J. A. Jones.

Dean A. Ballard attended the State fair at Lewiston and reports a good show of stock, etc., and a good attendance. Mr. Ballard is upon the road now in the employ of the Baxters, inspecting the sweet corn for packing. Very little corn in this section is sufficiently matured to be found available. A few days of hot weather in the beginning of the month raised the hopes of the growers only to have them dashed by the apprehension of frost on Sunday evening, which fortunately did not occur unless in specially exposed places. Still the early part of this week is discouragingly cold for those whose dependence is upon their corn fields. Many of those who planted corn last year have been unable to meet their bills for fertilizers, etc., and should this year's crop prove a failure it cannot but result in more or less suffering for many.

Mr. and Mrs. Seth Webb and daughter Inez, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hill and Guy and Theo. Stiles of South Chatham, N. H., went to Kezar on Sunday for an outing, and returning Mr. Hill and wife found their premises invaded by a party of summer tourists from Mountain pond and elsewhere on their way to South Conway, N. H. The party included Mansur Beard of New York, a Mr. Manning, Malcolm Ivy and Eric Greenhalge, son of the late ex-Gov. Greenhalge of Massachusetts. These, except Mr. Beard, are connected with the Nesmith parties of Lowell, Mass., who own and occupy their summer home in South Conway, N. H., part of the year. The party were entertained Sunday night by Mr. and Mrs. Hill and were met at Fryeburg, Monday, by others of their party.

Mrs. Fannie Riddon has returned to her home in Sweden, after some weeks' visit at her parental home.

Mrs. Ida Richardson has gone to Howard Hurd's to work, as Mrs. H. is not as well as for some time past.

Wirt Eastman left, Monday, Sept. 7, to accept a position at the Industrial School at Lancaster, Mass.

A friend from Boston of Mrs. Coleman came Sept. 5 to spend a few weeks with her and enjoy the beauties of Fryeburg.

Ezra Eastman and wife of Kezar, N. H., also Mrs. Ella McIntire and son attended the burial services of Mrs. Mary Eastman.

Mrs. Leonard has returned to her home in Boston to resume her school studies, after a vacation of a few weeks at Mrs. J. H. Hardy's.

Albert Spaulding, who has been at Willis Farrington's for the past four months, has finished work and returned to his home in Unity. Isaac Hobbs of Lowell takes his place.

E. L. Walker and wife, who with Norman Charles and wife of Fryeburg have been spending two pleasant weeks in camp at Lower Kezar, have returned to their respective homes.

A very heavy frost visited this section Sept. 7, killing all garden products not protected by coverings. A heavy fog lay on the intervals late in the morning and farmers are hoping it may save, in measure, their sweet corn. It will be a heavy blow to many who are depending on this crop for payment of their expenses.

J. Wado McIntire has disposed of his real estate in this section, the farm formerly owned by Jas. Page. The buildings were burned while Mr. Page owned them but later Mr. McIntire built a fine house near the site of the one burned, and as his business calls him away he has disposed of them to Geo. Thompson, formerly of H. Eber.

Mrs. Mary Eastman died at her home with her son, F. L. Eastman, at an early hour Wednesday, Sept. 2. She has been in feeble health for the past two years, but she had been as well as usual to within a day or so of her death. The burial services were held at Chatham church attended by Rev. B. N. Stone of Fryeburg. She was laid at rest by the side of her husband in the "Clay cemetery." She leaves several children to mourn for her.

SOUTH PARIS.

Starbird-Andrews Reunion.
The third reunion of the Starbird family was held at Grange Hall South Paris, Sept. 10. The idea of a reunion was first conceived two years ago, and at the first reunion only the sons and daughters of Stephen R. Starbird, ten in number, with their families, were present. Last year, it was decided to ask the cousins on both the father's and mother's side to be present. This included the Andrews relatives and made practically a Starbird-Andrews reunion. This year the plan was the same.

There were present this year the ten sons and daughters of Stephen R. Starbird, the oldest of whom is 69 years old, and the youngest 46 years. They are: Lovina Starbird, a deaf and dumb sister who has never married, Jonathan A. Starbird, Mrs. Anna Young, Mrs. Davis Curtis, Winfield S. Starbird, Mrs. Wm. Lewis, Frank L. Starbird, Mrs. Leroy Ryerson, Mrs. Sumner Dudley and Augustine R. Berry.

Others present of the Starbirds besides the families of the ten brothers and sisters were Mrs. Harriet Starbird, the third wife of Stephen Starbird, who is now 83 years old, and Edwin Starbird of Worcester, Mass., a cousin of the brothers and sisters.

Of the mother's side, none of the uncles are living, and only one aunt, Mrs. Loretta Churchill, widow of the late Kingman Churchill, who was able to be present.

Among others present were Samuel Dunham and wife, Samuel Estes and wife, and Mrs. Johnson Cushman of West Paris, Mrs. O. G. Curtis of South Paris and Milton Merriam and wife of Norway.

All assembled at Grange Hall soon after noon and marched down to the dining-room. Prayer was offered by Mr. Estes, and then all sat down to an excellent dinner.

The afternoon was passed in talking, with a few short speeches. Mrs. Marinda Cummings of South Paris, who is 88 years old, came down to the hall for a short time in the afternoon and sang three pieces.

Supper was served at the hall, and after supper a short program was carried out. Fifty-five sat down to dinner and sixty-five to supper.

Death of Kendall Swift.

Kendall Swift died at his home in this village Friday evening from the effects of a paralytic shock sustained on the morning of that day. He rose as usual that morning and built a fire, and a few minutes later suffered the attack from which he never rallied. His age was 73 years.

The funeral Sunday afternoon was attended by Rev. A. W. Folsom of the Methodist church. Mr. Swift had long been a member of that church, for many years one of its trustees, and a very regular attendant upon its services.

He was quiet and unobtrusive in his demeanor, but universally regarded as a worthy member of the community. Gradually failing health for some two years had somewhat affected him mentally.

He leaves a widow who was Ellen Tucker, but no children. He is survived by four brothers, residents of this town, Daniel, Alvin, Ansel and Chandler, and one sister, Mrs. Emory Lowell, also of this town.

Oliver M. Stuart is spending the week in Boston.

EAST STONEHAM.

On Caught in a Bear Trap.
An ox, the property of Jonas Bartlett, was caught in a bear trap which was set by Messrs. Whitehouse & McAllister. He strayed out of the pasture and went directly, it appeared, to the trap and was caught by the ankle and held fast. He was soon found and as he was in good condition it was deemed best to slaughter him at once. He had been out to pasture during the summer and was to have been sold for beef later on.

Most of the summer guests have fled homeward.

George Whitehouse and Frank McAllister caught a large bear last week in Red Rock Basin. It was fat we know, as we saw some of the meat of old Bruin after being dressed. These men are veteran hunters and seldom fail in trapping game. They were somewhat astonished to find they had caught an ox in one of their traps one morning last week and there was a rushing in hot haste.

Work for All Interested.
The people in this vicinity have been doing a much needed work in the cemetery in this place. They have pulled out the bushes and graded the lots making a great improvement in the looks of the place, although it still needs a lot of work done to finish the good work properly. It would be well for those who have lots or friends buried here to come and help finish putting the grounds in order, as everyone naturally feels an interest in having a beautiful resting place for their beloved dead. A day will be appointed soon to finish the work and those who wish to help can find out the date by applying to the postmaster in this place.
